How to Resume Creating a resume is a great first step in the job search. It is an opportunity to highlight your hard work and list your valuable skills. A resume should include a personal or professional summary; an overview of your education, experience, and accomplishments; a career history, including past and present employer and job titles; contact information; and keyword phrases. You may want to use your resume to pitch yourself to a specific employer.

Personal Summary Starting off your resume should be a personal summary. A personal summary is a short paragraph that you use to convey several things about yourself. The paragraph should include what you are looking for in a job, your current employment situation, and why you are seeking employment. An example of a personal summary might look like this:

Resume Highlights: I am seeking a long-term, well-compensated position with growth opportunities and excellent benefits. I enjoy the outdoors, playing sports, and reading. I have over five years of sales and customer service experience. My work experience includes selling gas appliances, as well as working in a retail environment. I excel at customer service and maintain a positive attitude, and I am excellent at meeting challenging deadlines.

Your education Your resume should include your education. Whether you are employed or not, you should list your education. Each degree should be listed with the institution and the year you completed it. Examples of different types of education you might list include: Bachelor of Science in Applied Science. Master of Science in Health Care Administration. Graduate Certificate in Business. Graduate Certificate in Business Marketing. To gain a better understanding of the format for each type of degree, read the Additional Resources section at the end of this article.

Your Experience Your resume should include your experience. This section should include your prior employment and positions you have held. You should be able to separate your work history into more than one section. You should use whichever format makes the most sense for your resume, as long as it is following these key points: Make sure your resume is a professional document. You will most likely be asked to include professional references (such as your manager or professor) to back up your resume. You should stick to the standard format for your
