Convert Word to Video 4dots will convert any Word file to nearly all the popular video formats. Create a list of source files In order to make sure all your documents are converted to videos, you first need to add them all to a list. The supported formats are DOCX, DOC and RTF, and you can browse to their location and load them. Alternatively, you can drag and drop them onto the main window, or load an entire folder altogether (only the compatible files are selected). You can even load a TXT list and speed up the process. Choose video transitions and background Once you are done adding the source files, you can move on to the next step, that of finding the most appropriate transition effect. Convert Word to Video 4dots provides with a wide range of options, such as crossfade, fade in/fade out, blur, curtain, slide, zoom in/zoom out and so on. Unfortunately, you cannot preview them before applying them, so it's a trial and error operation (watch the resulting video and if you are not pleased with the result, simply choose another transition). You can also select an audio track to be used as the background music (you can loop it as well). Select output video format The final step is to settle on the suitable format for converting your Word files. You can choose one of the numerous supported formats, such as AVI, 3GP, MPEG, MOV, MKV, FLV, SWF, VOB and many more. Conclusion All in all, due to Convert Word to Video 4dots, you can make sure your colleagues can read your documents even if they do not have Office installed. They simply need a video player and watch it on their PC, smartphone or whatever device they have. Author's review With Convert Word to Video 4dots, there's no longer any excuse for not being able to read your documents on whatever device your are. No further installation is needed and your documents are ready to be viewed whenever you want. You can choose from a variety of video formats that Convert Word to Video 4dots can produce, including AVI, MPEG, MKV, MOV, DV, H.264, WMV and 3GP, so there's no limit to the files you can convert. The program can be used for Word files created in any version b7e8fdf5c8

And one of the most exciting of these technologies is being developed by the Institute of Cardiovascular and Medical Sciences (University of Glasgow). Its discovery could one day allow plasma to be used to synthesise an entire supply of replacement tissue, for all kinds of organ injuries and failures. If successfully developed, this could mean unlimited amounts of reliable plasma-based "super" tissues for treating patients with a wide range of serious conditions. Plasma medicine involves bathing damaged or injured tissue in a patient's own blood plasma, where it is immediately repaired and takes over the functions of the damaged or inflamed cells. Biopsies Because of its clear benefits, plasma medicine has been attracting increasing interest and funding from both the public and private sectors. One of the most famous cases involved a baby girl born with a serious defect in her stomach. Her mother had undergone in-vitro fertilisation at just over 38 weeks' gestation. While she was still in the womb, the baby's stomach showed severe damage - and doctors had to remove it surgically. But at the time of the operation, it was impossible to restore the baby's

Now I'm trying to use it for my code that has some API calls. I understand how to use bluebird promises if I just want to return a value (or return a Promise that returns a value). return SomeApi.something().then((data) => { return Promise.map(data, (elem, ind) => elem.x); }); What if I want to have some sort of queue? Say that I have 2 routines that are doing the same thing, but using different objects. I can't synchronize them in the simple way above, because I don't know in advance what the queue is going to be. Each routine does the following thing: -MyFunc(..) { return someObj.getFoo(); } -BarFunc(..) { return someObj.getBar(); } Now in the BarFunc routine, we need to know if there is something in the queue, and if there is, we need to wait for it. So I change the routine to: -BarFunc(..) { return someObj.getBar().then(() => { return someObj.getFoo(); }); } So now I have 2 problems: Code above is returning a promise that is not rejected yet (how do I add catch and reject to it?). If 2nd function is called, but first
